DAYTON, Ohio, November 6, 1973 --- Four Dayton area college and university Presidents and many other distinguished educators will be on the campus of the University of Dayton Thursday and Friday this week as UD hosts the seventh annual conference of Academic Affairs Administrators in the midwest region.

Thursday morning, the welcome and opening address will be delivered by UD President Rev. Raymond A. Roesch and Vice Chancellor of the Ohio Board of Regents, William B. Coulter. Following the address, the four college Presidents, Dr. Robert J. Kegerreis of Wright State University, Dr. Marvin Knudson of Sinclair Community College, Mr. R. O. Brinkman of Clark Technical College, and Fr. Roesch of UD, will be panelists discussing the question: "Are There Barriers to Institutional Cooperation?"

Deans and professors from many other mid-west colleges will form panels to address the topics of "Non Traditional Programs and Their Impact on Academic Advising," "The Tarnished Image of Higher Education," and "Professionalism versus Unionism." Those schools represented in these discussions include Michigan State University, University of Illinois, Indiana University, Kalamazoo College, Ohio University, Youngstown State University, Northwestern Michigan College, Central Michigan University, Wright State and UD.

When registration is completed, 125 college administrators from eleven mid-west states are expected to participate in the conference.

Co-chairing the conference planning committee are Deans William Hoben of Business and Richard E. Peterson, Arts & Sciences of UD.
